

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

TEMPERY TINY

Tiny was very small. She was shorter and smaller than most little girls of her age. But she had a very big temper. Oh, how angry she could get at times. And how suddenly angry she could become. She used to pound her little fists and cry when she was a baby, and when she became older she would raise her voice and jump up and down with rage.

When she was like this her friends called her Tempery Tiny. Perhaps you will be surprised that a little girl with such a temper had a lot of friends. But somehow her friends seemed to know that she was trying her best not to let her temper get the better of her, and she only got angry once in a while.

Of course when she did get angry she got furiously angry but her fits of temper were growing fewer now and several times of late when she was about to get angry she had stopped herself, which was greatly to her credit.

She hadn't been angry for a long time and she was feeling quite proud of herself. She was never sulky. She was never surly.

And all of her friends said they would rather have her as she was than have her cross and surly and hard to get along with most of the time.

She was the most loyal friend, she was unselfish, she was always so very sad, too, after she had been angry. She used to hate herself after these times.

And the punishment her mother gave her always made her feel so terribly ashamed and miserable. No punishment in the world was worse than this one. It was the punishment she always got when she had been angry or rude.

For when she was angry she was very apt to be rude.

She would have to sit quietly in a chair without saying a word for twenty minutes. And no matter who came in the room she had to sit there, and no matter what time of the day.

Sometimes visitors came to call while she sat there and her mother explained she was being punished and so they would excuse her for not speaking.

Oh, how deeply that used to hurt her. It was certainly the hardest punishment of all.

And whatever chair she sat in during this time of silence was always called the punish chair. Now she did hate those words.

Brenda had come to supper. Brenda was one of her very dearest friends.

They had said and this Brenda and butter and cocoa for supper, and they were having it on blue china on the little blue table in Tiny's room.

They were laughing and talking when Brenda said:

"I met a new child today. She was over six. Her mother is a friend of my mother's."

"You'll never like her as much as you do me, will you Brenda?" Tiny asked.

"I don't know; how do I know that?" Brenda answered.

"You don't know!" Tiny shrieked. Her whole heart and mind and body seemed angry.

"You don't know whether you love me enough so as to love her as much as you love me?" Tiny asked.

"All right, play with your new friend."

Suddenly, before Brenda answered, Tiny had turned the chair from her place right over Brenda's head. Brenda got up and left the room. Down the stairs, out of the house.

They were chasing after her.

"Oh, Brenda, please don't go, please don't go. I didn't mean it. Only say you love me."

Slowly Brenda came back. "I was only teasing," she said. "I was sorry of you to throw the chair."

They sat everything to rights, they wiped the chair of Brenda's hair. No one ever knew what happened between the two. But it was more of a lesson than any punishment to Tiny. When she felt angry afterward she remembered how Brenda had looked with the chair over her head. That always made her stop her temper in time.

Non-Agony

On her first visit to a bank with her mother, Miss Margaret, she was in the line at the counter behind her mother. "And what do they feel 'em, mamma?" she inquired innocently.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

IV—The Dream of Columbus

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

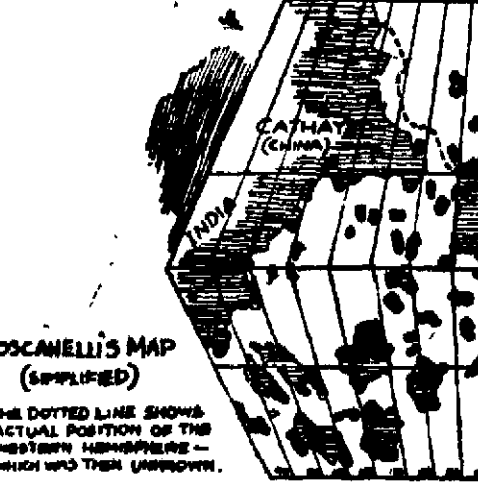

AMONG THE MARINERS OF THE 15TH CENTURY WHO DREAMED OF FINDING A NEW ROUTE TO THE COUNTRIES OF THE EAST WAS CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS, SON OF A WOOLCOMBER OF GENOVA, WHO HAD MADE MANY VOYAGES IN THE SERVICE OF THE KING OF PORTUGAL.

FROM HIS STUDIES OF GEOGRAPHY AND THE THEORIES OF ANCIENT SCIENTISTS THAT THE EARTH WAS ROUND AND NOT FLAT, COLUMBUS BECAME CONVINCED THAT HE COULD REACH THE INDIES BY SAILING WESTWARD ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

DETERMINED TO TEST HIS PLAN HE WROTE TO TOSCANELLI, THE NOTED FLORENCE ADVISER, FOR ADVICE. TOSCANELLI HAD READ MARCO POLO'S STORIES OF THE WEALTH OF THE EAST AND HAD TRIED TO PLAN SOME WAY TO REACH IT. HE APPROVED OF COLUMBUS' IDEA AND SENT HIM A MAP SHOWING THE ROUTE HE BELIEVED WOULD LEAD TO CHINA.

COLUMBUS THEN TRIED TO RAISE ENOUGH MONEY TO EQUIP AN EXPEDITION.

FAILING TO RECEIVE FINANCIAL AID FROM GENOVA AND VENICE AND BEING REFUSED HELP FROM THE KING OF PORTUGAL, COLUMBUS LAID HIS PLANS BEFORE KING FERDINAND AND QUEEN ISABELLA OF SPAIN. FORTUNATELY, JUST AT THIS TIME THE SPANISH WERE CELEBRATING THEIR VICTORY OVER THE MOORS AND THE SOVEREIGNS WERE PLEASED TO GIVE HIM FUNDS FOR HIS PROJECT.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

Mary Graham Bonner

TEMPERY TINY

Tiny was very small. She was shorter and smaller than most little girls of her age. But she had a very big temper.

Oh, how angry she could get at times. And how suddenly angry she could become.

She used to pound her little fists and cry when she was a baby, and when she became older she would raise her voice and jump up and down with rage.

When she was like this her friends called her Tempery Tiny.

Perhaps you will be surprised that a little girl with such a temper had a lot of friends. But somehow her friends seemed to know that she was trying her best not to let her temper get the better of her, and she only got angry once in a while.

Of course when she did get angry she got furiously angry but her fits of temper were growing fewer now and several times of late when she was about to get angry she had stopped herself, which was greatly to her credit.

She hadn't been angry for a long time and she was feeling quite proud of herself. She was never sulky. She was never auri.

And all of her friends said they would rather have her as she was than have her cross and surly and hard to get along with most of the time.

She was the most loyal friend, she was unselfish, she was always so very sad, too, after she had been angry.

She used to hate herself after these times.

And the punishment her mother gave her always made her feel so terribly ashamed and miserable. No punishment in the world was worse than this one. It was the punishment she always got when she had been angry or rude.

For when she was angry she was very apt to be rude.

She would have to sit quietly in a chair without saying a word for twenty minutes. And no matter who came in the room she had to sit there, and no matter what time of the day.

Sometimes visitors came to call while she sat there and her mother explained she was being punished and so they would excuse her for not speaking.

Oh, how deeply that used to hurt her. It was certainly the hardest punishment of all.

And whatever chair she sat in during this time of silence was always called the punish chair. How she did hate those words.

Brenda had come to supper. Brenda was one of her very dearest friends.

They had said and this bread and butter and cocoa for supper, and they were having it on blue china on the little blue table in Tiny's room.

They were laughing and talking when Brenda said:

"I met a new child today. She was over six. Her mother is a friend of my mother's."

"You'll never like her as much as you do me, will you Brenda?" Tiny asked.

"I don't know; how do I know that?" Brenda answered.

"You don't know!" Tiny shrieked. Her whole heart and mind and body seemed angry.

"You don't know whether you love me enough so as to be sure you couldn't love anyone else as well!" All right, play with your new friend."

Suddenly, before Brenda answered, Tiny had tossed the milk from her plate right over Brenda's head. Brenda got up and left the room, down the stairs, out of the house.

Tiny went chasing after her.

"Oh, Brenda, please don't go, please don't go. I didn't want it. Only you love me."

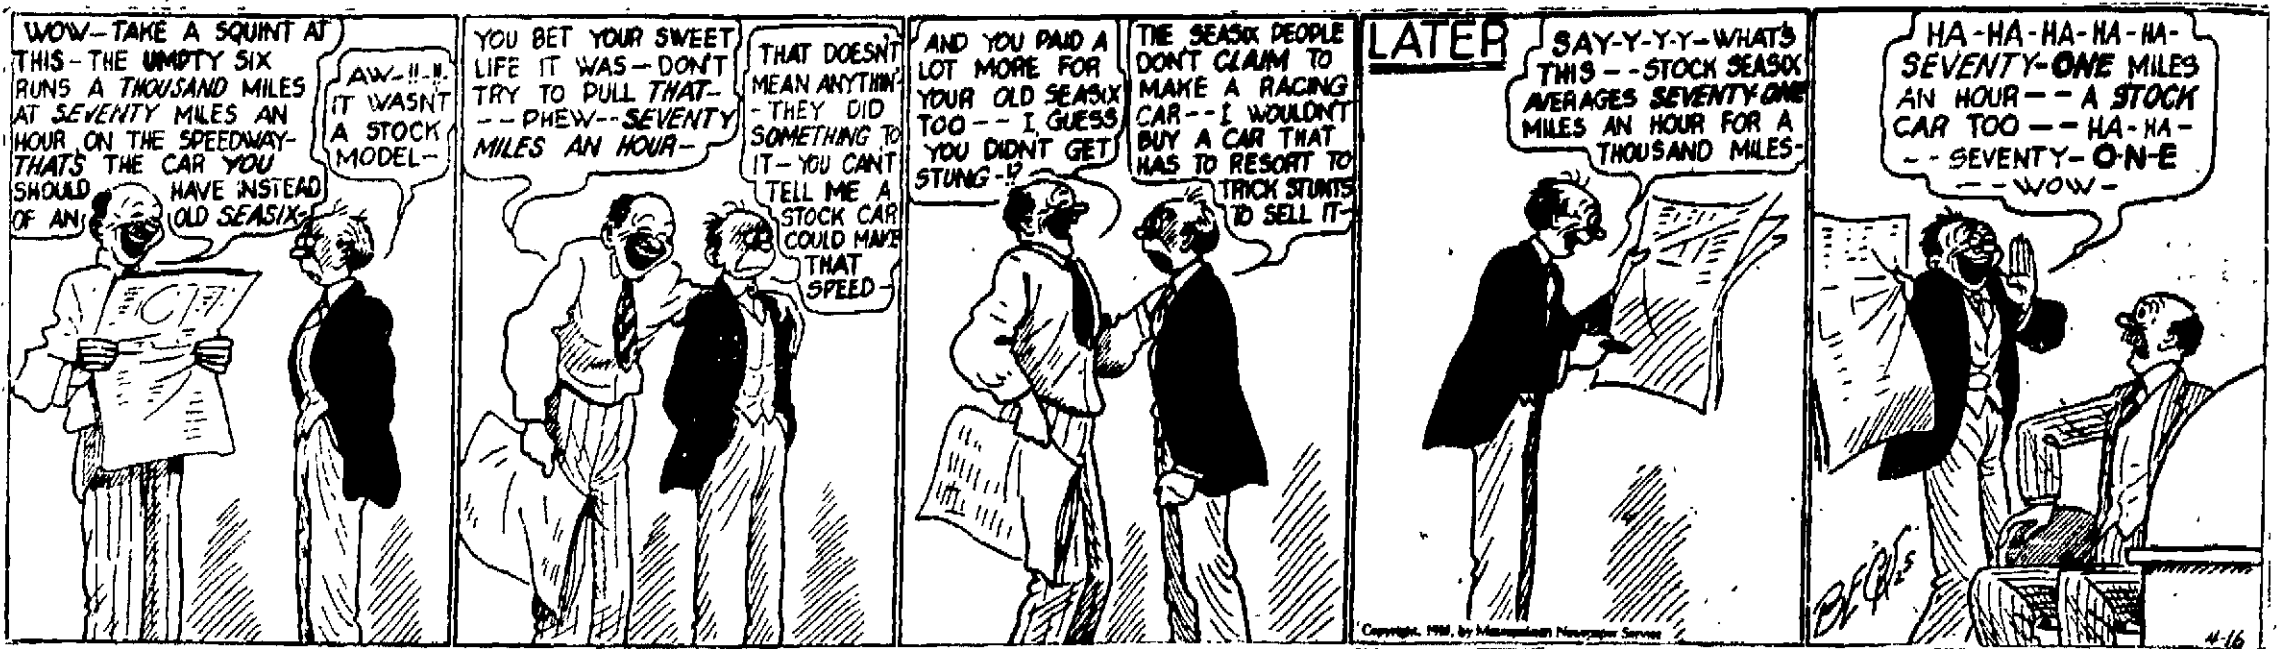

Shortly Brenda came back. "I was only teasing," she said. "It was horrid of you to throw the milk."

They sat everything to rights, they wiped the milk off Brenda's hair. No one knew what happened between the two. But it was more of a lesson than any punishment that Tiny. When over she felt angry afterward she remembered how Brenda had looked with the milk over her head. That always made her stop her temper in time.

On her first visit to a bank with her mother and sister Mary Jane went to the window behind the counter, behind the window, and what do they feel "can, cannot?" she inquired innocently.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

IV—The Dream of Columbus

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

AMONG THE MARINERS OF THE 15TH CENTURY WHO DREAMED OF FINDING A NEW ROUTE TO THE COUNTRY OF THE EAST WAS CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS. SON OF A WOODCOMBER OF GENOVA, WHO HAD MADE MANY VOYAGES IN THE SERVICE OF THE KING OF PORTUGAL.

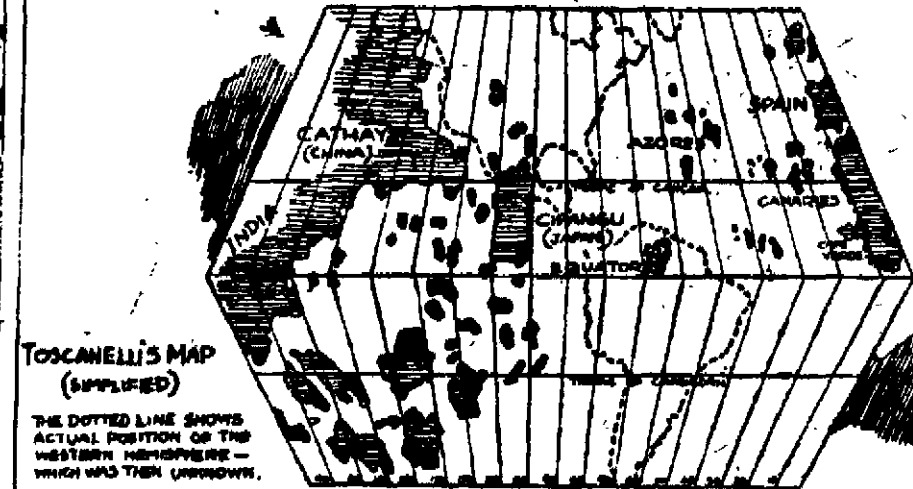

Copyright, 1924, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

FROM HIS STUDIES OF GEOGRAPHY AND THE THEORIES OF ANCIENT SCIENTISTS THAT THE EARTH WAS ROUND AND NOT FLAT, COLUMBUS BECAME CONVINCED THAT HE COULD REACH THE INDIES BY SAILING WESTWARD ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

DETERMINED TO TEST HIS PLAN HE WROTE TO TOSCANELLI, THE NOTED FLORENCE ASTRONOMER, FOR ADVICE. TOSCANELLI HAD READ MARCO POLI'S STORIES OF THE WEALTH OF THE EAST AND HAD TRIED TO PLAN SOME WAY TO REACH IT. HE APPROVED OF COLUMBUS' IDEA AND SENT HIM A MAP SHOWING THE ROUTE HE BELIEVED WOULD LEAD TO INDIA. COLUMBUS THEN TRIED TO RAISE ENOUGH MONEY TO EQUIP AN EXPEDITION.

FAILING TO SECURE FINANCIAL AID FROM GENOVA AND VENICE AND BEING REPAID HELP FROM THE KING OF PORTUGAL, COLUMBUS LAID HIS PLANS BEFORE KING FERDINAND AND QUEEN ISABELLA OF SPAIN. FORTUNATELY, JUST AT THIS TIME THE SPANIARDS WERE CELEBRATING THEIR VICTORY OVER THE MOORS AND THE SOVEREIGNS WERE PLEASED TO GIVE HIM FUNDS FOR HIS PROJECT.

HINTS AND THINGS

As a rule, many of the things which are good for us we do not like. It is hard to get people to eat the food they should, always, as it is not easy for any one to take disagreeable medicine, yet it is frequently necessary.

If children could be taught to form the habit of eating the right kind of foods, early, what a vast trouble it would save in later life.

It is normal for everybody to like or be able to eat without discomfort all kinds of good food.

A normal child may not particularly like spinach, but if the older members of the family eat it without protest, they will usually be brought to take their share. We cannot all be expected to like all foods equally well, but let us train ourselves to be able to eat anything which is eatable and well served. If father makes slighting remarks about certain foods, it is not to be wondered at that son will have the same feeling, and refuse to eat, perhaps just the kind of food essential for his growth.

Greens of all kinds are good for the blood, supplying vitamins for growth and health and are called the brooms of the blood. Such foods should be carefully cooked and seasoned to make them appetizing. The appearance and taste are most important.

A salad dressing which the children will like is the ordinary mayonnaise in which a teaspoonful of peanut butter has been stirred for every half cup. If peanuts are liked, use a few chopped and sprinkled over a dish of tender lettuce and dressing. The flavor will often appeal where a plain dressing would not be enjoyed.

Another good habit to form early, so it isn't so easy to learn new habits later, is to masticate all food well, chewing until the food just swallows itself and take a drink of whatever is served with the mouth completely empty. Mixing food with liquids in the mouth, does not give the saliva a chance to work on the food, and the saliva is an important digestive juice. It is not wise to buy fruits out of season or expensive because vegetables which appeal, only to bring disappointment.

Public health lies at the very foundation of all human welfare. Cleanliness is conserved and protected, there is very little use in any other activity for the promotion of public welfare.

—Calvin Coolidge.

John Bunyan Described
John Bunyan, the author of the famous "Pilgrim's Progress," is described as a tall, red-haired man, stern of countenance, quick of eye and mind of speech, who as a boy was very fond of swimming.

Parrot Vocabulary
Intelligent young gray African parrot will acquire a vocabulary of 100 words or more, associating them so accurately that often they are used with startling effect.

Tailored Suit Is Liked for Spring

Conservative Modes Rule—Parisian Knee-Length Popular Model.

If it is possible to select and define a type from the elaborate offering of the season's styles the fashionable figure is to be slender and young. Youth, upstanding, outstepping, expressing pride of life, even if sometimes in terms of athletics, is the ideal of the hour. Clothes must reflect this and be both chic and conventional. There is evident a standardized model, more conservative than it would be had it not been for the extremes of late seasons.

The conventionality suits the day and its ways, and a certain unmistakable refinement stamps the best among the latest styles. Lines are tempered to define simplicity and grace, and the most radical change in color models is evident. The violent colors have almost wholly disappeared, and the quiet, richer shades are now fashionable.

All the tans, browns, grays and the softer greens and taupes are used by the best designers, who are showing also some high lights in red, discreetly interpreted. For all of this uniformity and toning down there is no monotony in the present season. It is a day of individuality, of personality and of original ideas. The American woman of fashion dresses after the Parisian manner if that chance to please her, but in any event she elects to be pleased and not, as heretofore, to follow automatically.

So says a fashion writer in the New York Times.

Less Controversy.
There appears to be less controversy than ever before regarding the new modes, except as to skirt length. Paris amuses herself by placing the bottom line of the skirt just below the knee, or barely over the knee. This is just what Paris did four or five years ago, with varying and entertaining results in the styles of this side. A few among the ultra-smart returning from abroad appeared in skirts of the same length they wore at the age of ten, regardless of gray or dyed locks, long or bobbed. The rebound among Americans lowered the skirt which the best couturiers prophesied will again happen shortly.

The really chic woman will have her skirt hemmed seven to ten inches above the floor. Another, wishing to be more extreme, will shorten it to twelve inches, and the woman who goes in for the period costume will cut her skirts to her ankles. As to lines in the latest styles there is much variety. In the more formal street dress the straight line is usual, the tendency toward a shaped waistline, the flare flounce and pocket in the skirt is occasional.

These depend upon the designer who presents a type. Redfern clings to the uncurved, even "box" outline, and shows at the same time a fine restraint in the length of his skirts and the cut of his coats. From the house of Martini at Armand are received some uncommonly attractive models, straight, shorter and more smart of skirt, and with loose, untraced straight-line coats. Most distinctive among Jean Patou's advance models are some spring suits of smart simplicity and incomprehensibly straight silhouette.

Many other creations of Paris styles are presenting new lines in other types, some of which will appeal to the well-dressed American, others that suit better the taste of the Frenchwoman. Noteworthy, Louise Bonheur, Doucet, Agnes and Cheron are showing the latest styles of the hour, the cleverer fashions and modes. Worth is another among the designers whose latest models are more supple, yet slim and graceful. Lanvin employs much plaiting the inverted plait for the practical purpose of giving more width, plaited panels, plaited flounces.

All of these authorities in the matter of fashions have a following among fashionable Americans, who even vary the models on occasion. The first things presented, though often done originally in silk, satin or crepe, are translated for spring into fine woollens, kasha, wool bengaline, wool poplin, charmeuse. The more severe styles, all the variants of the tailleur are made of twills, tweeds and the Rodier fabrics. The difference of feeling and adaptation of these French models adapted for Americans are interesting, and the results are usually successful.

The type of spring suit which is having an almost universal vogue is the three-piece, known by the much-overworked name of "ensemble." It is three-piece only in the sense that the frock takes the place of skirt and blouse which were required in the original tailored suit. The new crepes and silks, the many artistic printed things are used for this.

The figured material of the dress harmonizes with the coat of wool, of silk, satin, or whatever, and some of the coat's material is often seen on the dress—a narrow collar, a band on the sleeve, some form of trimming on the skirt. The coat invariably is lined with the same material as that of the dress. This constitutes the popular "ensemble." Its variations are numberless, many of them delightful. The fashionable shades of beige, tan, yellow, gray and light brown combine in soft harmonies of color with the new printed crepes, which are more artistic than any that ever have been shown for this style of costume.

The grounds of these usually are in soft tones of ivory, beige or pearl, on which the patterns in all the new colors, with sharp points of black or scarlet, are shown in effective relief. The favorite materials have a soft, finely rough surface like the old-style camel-hair so much worn by women of refined taste. Kasha, its descendant, is the most fashionable fabric of the year, the lightest weave being shown for spring, and natural kasha, an indefinite mixture in beige, is absolutely all the rage. A long, straight, supple coat of natural kasha over a frock of beige crepe printed in a Brandt design of rich brown, black or scarlet or one of small conventionalized floral patterns, the coat lining also of the crepe, represents the best type of the season's mode.

Two-Piece Model Popular.

The two-piece is another successful model, less formal than the three-piece, but smart and practical for many occasions. It is much used for sports suits, of course, with the many styles of separate skirts, overblouses, sweaters, tailored shirts and waistcoats. But some lovely, softly made frocks are accomplished with skirt and dressy overblouse or tunic. These as well as the three-piece suits are made of the light-weight woollens and of the rich heavy silks that are equally suitable for gowns or wraps. With these frocks a separate coat is required, which may be of a color that will harmonize with several dresses.

While the vogue of tailored skirts has been and will be, the plain colors are seen in some of the handsomest models, some of the prevalent designs are evidently preferring to be unique in offering something different from the prevailing type. Noteworthy, for instance, has come a charming three-piece gown slightly gathered, cut with flaring skirt, all in one creamy shade of beige crepe fabric. A pretty "ensemble" from Agnes is built of wool poplin in light tan, the entire outfit in two materials, plain, and a self-colored girdle of the wool. The rest being flared with silk of the same shade.

His Curiosity Satisfied

The curiosity of a number of a country road was aroused by the hearing, too small to read, on the square of a car ahead. Amidst to know what it said, he put his foot on the accelerator and read: "If you can see this you are too doped clean for company."

Wants 21 Years For Prohibition

Palmer Canfield Says More Time Is Needed to Determine Whether It Is Success—Cashin, Prosecuting Violators, Says Enforcement Is Job.

Different views on prohibition and enforcement of dry laws were presented by two Kingston men, both holding Federal positions in New York city, before the Institute of Arts and Sciences at Columbia University Wednesday night, when Palmer Canfield, Federal prohibition director of New York, and Assistant United States District Attorney John M. Cashin, in charge of prosecution of prohibition law violations, discussed the dry situation.

Mr. Cashin, who comes in direct contact with the enforcement problem, told the institute that enforcement at present was a "joke."

"The remedy for lack of enforcement," said Mr. Cashin, "lies in the community. The national prohibition act needs both teeth and sufficient appropriations to carry on the work. Present enforcement is a joke."

He added that the government has only 255 men in the Southern District of New York and, as many of them must be detailed for routine work, the director has really only about fifty men a day with whom to accomplish results. He said enforcement presented practical difficulties and instances his being threatened with arrest by the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals unless he got some cats out of Mouquin's which had been shut in there when the place was padlocked.

Mr. Canfield said he had no intention of painting a glowing picture of success in prohibition enforcement and that "super-patience is necessary to gain effectiveness."

"We have had Federal prohibition for five years," he said. "Let us wait until it grows to maturity, that is, about twenty-one years. If it has not succeeded in that time, then it may be designated a failure. But it cannot be judged in so short a time as five years."

He said he granted to any one the right to attack the amendment legally, but that it was impossible to lessen its rigors, since each Congress had been more dry. He said the law was not perfect, wherein it resembled other laws, but that the only changes had been in the direction of making it more rigid.

What Weather Does to Radio

Do weather conditions influence radio? Professor Eugene Van Cleef of Ohio State University thinks they do. He says in an article in the May issue of Radio Broadcast Magazine that "it occurred to the writer when he heard statements referring to the weather and radio reception, that their logic was frequently faulty. It seemed that with broadcasting and receiving stations often times 500 to 1,000 miles apart, the local weather conditions at the receiving stations could not have much influence on reception unless the same conditions prevailed over all the country between the two stations. Such uniformity in weather is not common. Therefore, to ascribe poor reception to the local weather could not be an accurate analysis. Furthermore, it was true that occasionally when the weather was 'bad', reception was good, although the association of the two facts at such times was overlooked. It seems to be a common trait among most of us to analyze and criticize rather thoroughly when things go wrong but to take things for granted when we are enjoying results which seem to us to be wholly normal. "The situation led to an investigation which has thus far revealed some striking conclusions. It seems that since broadcasting involves the transmission of electro-magnetic waves, a wave motion transverse in type, there might be a definite relation between such transmission and the circulation of air in high and low pressure areas. Observations were made to determine whether any such relationship might exist, or whether there could be a relation between the strength and clarity of the reception and the arrangement of isobars. "A five tube neodyne set was used, with an outside antenna about 125 feet long. The direction of the antenna was almost exactly north-east-southwest and about thirty feet from the ground. The observations follow:

1. If a line connecting the receiving station with the broadcasting station crosses the intervening isobars at right angles, reception is at its best.
2. The steeper the isobaric gradient (that is, the closer the isobars to each other) the stronger the reception.
3. The more nearly the transmitted waves approach parallelism with the isobars, the weaker the reception. Under these conditions, fading occurs.
4. Reception in a low pressure area tends to be somewhat weaker than in a high of corresponding intensity.
5. Reception is weaker when the transmitted waves cross from one pressure area into another.
6. The strength of reception for any station is a factor of both its location in a pressure area and its position with respect to the broadcasting station.
7. "Bad weather" does not affect reception, excepting as it may be in the index of an unfavorable pressure distribution.
8. Reception can be as good in "bad weather" as in good weather if the pressure distribution is right.
9. Temperature does not influence reception, excepting as it may be the index of pressure distribution, as follows:

- (a) Reception is better in winter than in summer because the cyclones and anti-cyclones are more intense in the winter period.
- (b) Reception is better when temperatures are low than when high, because low pressure usually indicate intensive high pressure areas, that is, areas with intense isobaric gradients.
- (c) Low temperatures accompanying poorly defined high pressure areas make reception poor.
10. Shallow or flat pressure areas result in much static—noise in the receiver.

Few people from here attended a dance at Walden Thursday evening. They report a jolly time.

Mrs. W. Ipsher and Mrs. Raymond DuBois are in Kingston recently.

The Rev. R. Braunstein, H. E. Wilcox and J. W. Peeter were in Port Ewen last week attending a meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wadlin entertained an Easter party of relatives and had a very delightful time at their home on White street.

Few from this place attended the Grand Matrons visit to Vassar Chapter, Poughkeepsie O. E. S. held in army. It was a grand affair. The work put on after chapter work was beautiful and it certainly required much time and practice for perfecting the affair.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Fisher and son, Elmer, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rhoda were in Watson Hollow Easter for a motor trip and enjoyed it greatly.

Mrs. Frances Turner is visiting her people in New York city.

Mrs. John Goldt has returned from Ozone Park.

REGIONAL PLANNING COUNCIL FOR HUDSON VALLEY

Various cities and villages in the Central Hudson Region will be represented at the International City and Regional Planning Conference to be held in New York next week.

It is likely that a regional council for this section of the state will be formed, to function in conjunction with the New York State Commission on Housing and Regional Planning.

Sullivan Jones, state architect, who is at the head of the state commission, has urged the community of the Central Hudson Region to organize a council of representative citizens who will do for this section what is being done in the Niagara frontier, along the Mohawk, in the Capital district and elsewhere in this state.

Nearly 100 delegates from foreign countries are now on their way to attend the conference which begins on Monday at the Hotel Pennsylvania, and will continue five days.

There will also be representatives from most of the principal cities of the United States. In fact, it is announced that this will be the largest conference of its kind ever held.

Delegates Alfred H. Smith of New York will open the conference with a address of welcome on Monday.

A citizens' committee, headed by Frederick J. Kopp, President of the Carnegie Corporation, has made elaborate plans for the reception of the visiting delegates. These include automobile tours to West Point and to study the gateway systems and housing developments of the New York region, and a boat trip around Manhattan Island, at which the visitors will be guests of the city of New York.

Each of four days of conference will be devoted to consideration of four problems of the region: "Transportation, zoning, central city, new subdivisions, and regional planning. The program as given will pass particular emphasis upon the last-named problem.

Seems Reasonable

Since people read newspapers every day, and

People read newspaper advertising every day, and

People buy merchandise every day,

Why isn't it good business to advertise every day?

Or, at least, to advertise frequently and persistently?

If every day is a good day to try to sell goods, then

All days are goods days to advertise your store—your service—your merchandise.

Molecules

A "molecule" is the smallest part of a substance that can exist separately and still retain its composition and properties, the smallest combination of atoms that will form a given chemical compound. In physics, the structural unit, as distinguished from the atom, and applied to particles of matter in the atomic theory independently of their relation to the chemical molecule.

this fine-flavored healthful fruit costs you less than 2¢ a service

That's one of the wonderful things about SUNSWEET PRUNES—their amazing economy. In addition to being one of the finest and most healthful fruits you can eat, they are also one of the least expensive to serve.

Dieticians and doctors give prunes first choice for breakfast because no other fruit-food so nearly fills the breakfast needs. Being rich in mineral salts, sugars and vitamins, they possess the natural cellulose, the tender fruit tissue, so necessary to provide bulk and balance for the ordinary highly concentrated foods served for breakfast.

Serve prunes often, especially at this season—and be sure you get "Sunsweet," California's finest prunes—not only because they are so good to eat—not merely because they are so really good and healthful for you—but also, because they are one of the most economical fruits you can put on your table.

Protect yourself! Buy SUNSWEET PRUNES, always clean and fresh, in our new sanitary 2-lb. carton or in bulk, from the regular 25-lb. box. You will be delighted with their uniform high quality.

Wife Beaters Will Be Lashed

By Telegraph to the Freeman
Baltimore, April 16.—Wifebeaters who appear before Judge Henry Duffy, in criminal court here, will receive more than a tongue-lashing for sentence—they will receive a whip-lashing. The judge made known his intention after hearing the case of Mrs. Edda Simmons against her husband, Robert.

Mrs. Simmons testified her husband beat and kicked her because she didn't give him enough money out of her pay envelope. Judge Duffy gave Simmons six months in the House of Correction.

"The next wife-beater who comes before me," said the judge, "will be surprised to learn I have revived the use of the whipping post in Maryland."

The judge will find it easy to make good his threat, as the official whipping post, long regarded as a relic of other days, still stands in the yard at city jail, ready for the next victim to receive the proverbial "thirty lashes."

FROM TUNIC TO JUMPER.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

One must have something of the daring spirit of the pioneer to plunge into the purchase of the new jumpers offered to complete the smart spring tallcut. "From tunic to jumper—in one reel," should be the title of a pictorial story of the overblouse—and how the overblouse came to be a part of the dress, may be a sub-title.

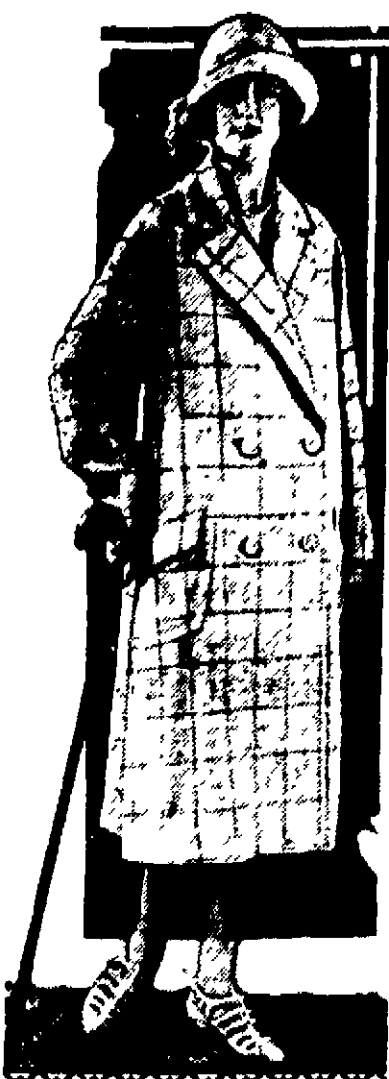

It is an open secret that not only sports costumes, but in more isolated instances, even dresses, have been divided, and are now in waist and skirt effect. The one-piece dress is not, of course, entirely taboo, but it is not being started—the jumper and two-piece costume being newer, therefore more worthy of discussion and more sure of a tryout.

It seems rather superfluous to add that the blouses sketched are French, or that the plaid taffeta blouse has registered, for things made of taffeta are being critically regarded and usually accepted.

Common Fabrics; How They Get Their Names

Every one knows what a blanket is, but how many know that it got its name from Thomas Blanket, a famous clothier, who made blankets in England about the year 1840?

And did you know that shawls first were made for floor coverings? Sala is the Sanskrit word for floor, and that is where we get the name shawl.

Bandanna is from the Indian word bandanna, meaning to bind or tie. You see, the cloth is tied into knots when dipped into the dye, and this is what gives the clouded effect seen in the original bandanna handkerchief.

Fourard was originally made for handkerchiefs only, and the name is French for "silk handkerchiefs."

We have all heard the masculine expression "to go down into his jeans" when what is meant is that he produces the money. Now, the word "jeans" has a still closer connection with money. It is the name for a Genoese coin, and in selling cloth, it was customary to say, "So much for one jean." That is how the name came to be applied to the familiar coarse woolen fabric used for men's clothing.

Momie, or mummy, a plain weave of flax or linen yarn, was originally the winding sheet or shroud of Egyptian mummified dead.

Tweed, that familiar, rough, unfaded fabric of cotton and wool, usually made of yarns of two or more shades, is so called because it was originally the product of weavers on the banks of the river Tweed in Scotland.

Many women have wondered just what panne velvet really meant. The word "panne" is simply the French word for plush. And the name is applied to a wide range of satin-faced velvets or silks that show a high luster which has been produced by pressure.

Pique is French for "quitting." Originally it was applied to a cloth woven in diamond-shaped designs to imitate quilting. When used to designate our familiar corded cloth the name is really a misnomer. Cheville is French for "caterpillar," so that when applied to the well-known cloth with the fuzzy fluffy face, the name is most appropriate. Cheville is used sometimes for dress goods, but more generally for curtains and table throws.

Pink Is Favorite Color for Dainty Dance Frock

At the moment there is no more fashionable or popular color than pink in any one of its varied tones, from the delicate tint like the flush of an apple blossom to that deep intense color seen in the afterglow of an Al pine sunset. In between, there are any number of lovely shades, and when several are put together the effect is even smarter and more becoming.

One of the loveliest dance frocks is of pale pink ribbon with touches of silver ribbon on the full wide skirt and a bit of dark blue for contrast in the flower placed to emphasize the long waist line of the tight little bodice.

Another is of tulle layers, shading from pale pink to the deep fuchsia tone. There is a petticoat of silver lace and a narrow edge of lace on the under slip of pink satin chiffon. Tulle ribbon in a deep fuchsia tone is used for the sash.

Women's Gloves

A new idea has been developed in London in gloves for women's wear. They are made of artificial silk with invisible finger tips. The fabric is torn off into invisibility at the finger tips, displaying in a subtle way the natural fingers. How this is accomplished is not explained.

Crabtree Home For Government?

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Quincy, Mass., April 16.—An offer to sell the $150,000 summer estate of the late Lotia Crabtree, on the ocean front at Squantum, has been made to the United States government as a site for the proposed government hospital for veterans suffering from nervous diseases.

The offer was made by Major General Clarence R. Edwards, one of the executors of the actress's estate.

The Crabtree estate has a frontage of one mile on the water.

The new hospital is to take the place of the United States Veterans' Hospital 44, at West Roxbury. The lease on the property will expire in June, 1926.

Chamber of Commerce, Kingston, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—A crew of bogus subscription agents recently working in New England are now, we believe, working in the eastern part of New York State.

They represent themselves to be direct subscription agents for our publication and are securing payments in advance for annual subscriptions on a form of receipt unauthorized by us.

From information that comes to our hands, these men travel in suits and automobiles and have given receipts signed with the following names:

The DAIRY

INCREASED INCOME DERIVED FROM COW

The number of dairy cows and the interest in dairying has increased greatly during the past few years. This has been due to the greater income to be derived from dairy cows during the period of depression. The question of overproduction has been brought up in view of this dairy interest.

It is not the problem of overproduction which should concern us, but rather the problem of encouraging real dairymen to take up dairying and how to keep them in business permanently after they are once established. Periods of depression have come before and many have taken up the dairy cow. The fact to be regretted is that as soon as grain or cattle or any other agricultural pursuit became profitable again, a large number of forced the cow and gave up the business. Will this occur again, and if so, how can it be prevented?

No man should undertake dairying unless he really likes cows, and no man should begin before first making the firm determination to stay with the industry. Nothing is more disturbing to agricultural economics than the lack of permanency, consistency, and stability. The farmer who is constantly changing his agricultural business is usually "out" in times of high prices for that industry and "in" during the times of low prices.

Since 1850 the ratio between our population and our dairy cattle has remained practically constant. From 1850 to 1920 our population increased 38 per cent. If this increases at the same rate in the future, our population will need more cows to maintain the ratio. During recent years our consumption of milk has increased, and it will continue to increase as the value of milk as a food is realized.—B. W. Fairbanks, Colorado Agricultural College.

Balanced Ration Is Best For Producing More Milk

Twenty good cows were recently placed in an experiment at the Illinois agricultural experiment station, and the results are very definitely in favor of a balanced ration. The 20 cows were divided into two lots, and during a preliminary period, both received a balanced ration, which consisted of 30 pounds of corn silage, 8 pounds of clover hay, 4-23 pounds of gluten feed, 3-13 pounds of ground corn. The nutritive ratio of the ration is 1:6. After the first period, one of the lots was taken off of a balanced ration, and given the following instead: Thirty pounds of corn silage, 5 pounds of timothy hay, 3 pounds of clover hay, 8 pounds of ground corn; nutritive ratio of 1:11.

At the end of 131 days, lot 1, which had a balanced ration, had gained from 1.7 to 10.65 pounds of milk per day. The lot which was changed to an unbalanced ration gained from .09 to .305. In other words, even though the second lot was getting what many farmers might call at a glance a good variety of feeds, it was failing to gain along with the balanced ration by a long way. This illustrates very well the point we have made before: Even though you may be feeding roughage and a grain you are not getting all the milk you could from the same cows unless you know that the feeds are balanced.

Producing Quality First Is Aim of Good Dairyman

The far-sighted dairyman has no trouble in realizing that one of the biggest factors in his business is to market a first-grade product. During the past few years, attention has been more forcibly paid to dairy products as an essential human food. Through the efforts of the National Dairy council, the great army of physicians, nurses, state and federal institutions, the consumption of dairy products has been slightly increased per capita.

This increase per capita can be advanced tremendously when each and every man who milks cows realizes that he is like every one else in business namely, that when he produces quality first, volume always follows.

The best buttermaker on earth cannot make first-grade butter from second-grade cream. This summer let us all renew our efforts to market a product of which we can be proud.

Get out the milk cooler, keep the barn and surroundings clean and sweet, wash the separator after every time it is used, wash the cow's udders and brush them off a little often; the details count, and attention to details pays.—H. R. Lascelles, Fieldman for the Colorado State Dairy Commission.

Solve Problem of Feeding

Endless when fed along with alfalfa hay or even native hay solves the greatest problem of feeding cows to keep them in milk flow. When a farmer has enough alfalfa hay and some other good hay, the amount of grain necessary is greatly reduced.

Need Good Winter Feed

Dairy cattle need good winter feed. They do not carry as much flesh as beef cattle and therefore need more protection.

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

Features at the Boy Scout Dance

Chief Executive Neeslage submits the following regarding the Ulster County Boy Scout dance and entertainment to be held May 1, at the armory:

How could anyone possibly keep a fellow like the following down? Bury him in a great city, maroon him on a desert island, banish him in the big woods, put him aboard on a vessel and he would see some way out.

This Boy Scout was 15 and he wanted a vacation job very badly, but jobs were very scarce in Washington, D. C. at that time. He not only wanted a job, but had very little capital with which to get a job, and could not afford to pay the customary fee to an employment agency, so being a Scout he brought his training to his assistance.

He took his last "two-bits," paid his way up into Washington. Monument and from the open window at the top he studied the city carefully. Finally he located three sections where construction work was going on. Making a few careful notes he descended and set out about for these points. At the second place he got a job and remained there throughout the summer vacation period. Owls and kingfishers constantly used the idea, but nobody but an alert boy, receiving a training such as a Boy Scout receives would have thought of it.

There are thousands of boys in Ulster county who are anxious to get in on this scouting "stuff" and to attend the Scout camp, but the Boy Scout organization needs the funds to carry on for the balance of the year, so instead of asking for a donation are making it possible for everyone to assist them and at the same time get enjoyment by attending the Boy Scout entertainment and dance at the New York state armory on Friday evening, May 1.

The fact that the entire proceeds of this affair are to be used only for the extension of the work in scouting and to help in the purchasing of a camp site for the boys is stimulating the sale of the tickets to a considerable extent.

J. J. Burns, chairman of the ticket committee, has been very busy man these last several days getting the tickets distributed to the large number of salesmen who have consented to act with him in their sale. To date 2,500 of the 3,000 to be sold are in the hands of these determined workers.

But this is not the only committee that has been busy, as the entertainment committee has been working overtime getting together the best program of entertainers possible and the fact that every one of them is an Ulster county artist should make it all the more interesting. We would like nothing better than to tell you about each one of them separately, but like the Scout in the beginning of this article, we can only give you a "bird's eye view." It will then be necessary for you to follow this view up and get those tickets now. Just glance over this layout of entertainers and remember that a whole evening of dancing is to follow and all for $1.

Wild Bill's Last Spree

By ELIZA M. HARVEY

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

YOUTH sat heavily upon Wild Bill Wesson. Just now Wild Bill was learning—not to his taste, exactly—but learning, for all that.

His girl had thrown him down for the measly Kelly, who hadn't the courage to be so wild as he. His career in life was wrecked—just as his motorcycle had been wrecked in the last race. If he hadn't hit that skid he would certainly have walked away with nine thousand dollars, a perfectly good pair of legs, and a perfectly good girl.

But the chap who did win the nine thousand—Wild Bill cursed him under his breath, then he suddenly said aloud, defiantly—to no one and no thing in particular—

"I'm going on one wild spree! They call me Wild Bill—just because I drove a motorcycle hell-bent where any other guy is afraid to make more than forty miles. Well—I got mine, all right! But I'm not done yet, just because I've got a game leg. Wait till I get on my feet."

He got on his feet several months later, with a slightly perceptible limp—a bitter heart—and a recklessness that boded ill for anything that stood in its way. Money had been showered on Wild Bill with lavish hand by the fates—and an indulgent parent. He was like any other man who had come too early to the age of twenty-four.

If any man ever earned a sobriquet, Wild Bill earned his from then on. Wild parties and wild women knew Wild Bill as a thick as-thieves intimate; till Wild Bill's old girl, being selfish and a coward at heart, shook inwardly at the havoc she had wrought and wondered what would be the end.

There's no knowing what the end might have been—if Kelly's old girl hadn't been in the Blue Owl that night. She danced with Bill as a silvery curtain dropped from nowhere around the dance floor—cutting the revelers at the tables completely from sight. The huge shaded chandelier over the dance floor went dark, Wild Bill hugged the girl up to him and said under his breath:

"Give us a kiss." The girl pulled back quickly, and answered with a sharp intake of breath.

"Not unless you take me away from here in that big blue car outside."

Bill kissed her with a grin. And five minutes later they were tearing down the long smooth road. There was a careening silence, till Bill said abruptly:

"You're here—what'll you have?"

"You!" the girl spoke sharply. "You're too good a man to go like this. You think that girl broke your heart and wrecked your life just because she threw you down for Kelly. Kelly threw me down for her. You're worth ten of Kelly. You've got to stop before it's too late."

"Wow! Got to, eh? Where do you get off? What have I got to stop for? Nobody cares for me, my girl."

"I do. I've been mad about you ever since you first started racing, but I was promised to Kelly—and I kept my word. She never cared for you in a minute like I do. You know there's other things in life besides racing. You're just off on the wrong foot. Take some of that coin you're wasting and start round the world in this car—with me. Get into a decent business, marry me and settle down and try the other side of life. If it's no go—you can step out, say 'I'm through—good-bye and good luck,' and you won't hear a word from me. If it pans out—well, who knows! Anyway—I'm willing to try—and I'll stick—and I keep my word."

The big blue car slowed down to a creeping pace. Bill looked at the girl with eyes and brain cleared by the shock of what she was saying. Suddenly he laughed uproariously. He stepped on the gas—and Wild Bill yelled over his shoulder:

"Well! That's one kind of spree I've never tried! But I'll try anything once. You're on—let's go!"

He was still laughing when the justice of the peace signed sleepily over the words that made them one, hours later. The girl's face was set. She had made a grandstand play—but she was not afraid to race it out with him.

There's a quiet little town in the West where business is booming under the hand of a keen-eyed, clear-brained chap. Everybody in town swears by him. He has a wife that he wouldn't take all the kingdoms of the world for, and who rules his life with her slightest smile. He has two children that are the pride of his heart. He leads a cool, sane, steady life that many a man points out as a top-notch existence for example to his growing sons.

Wild Bill Wesson is still on his last spree.

What Else Could He Do?

She was a practical young woman, and he had been sitting with her for a long time. When they met at the party she thought it was time she brought him up to the scratch.

Games were in progress after dinner, and he, searching for her, discovered her in the conservatory.

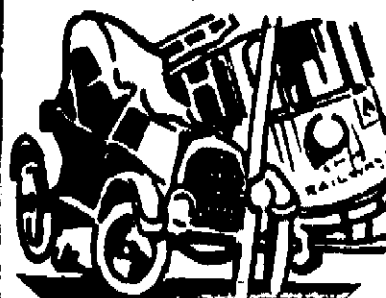

"Come along," he said, "we're just going to play 'Kim-Is-In-Ring,' and I want to play it unless you play."

"Let's play it out here," she answered. "I'll give you the kim and you give me the ring."

And another young engaged couple went back to the drawing room.

Why are 34,000 teachers training pupils to use LIFEBOUY?

You know what wonderful work teachers are doing to guard the health of children—directed by able physicians and nurses.

Over thirty-four thousand of these devoted teachers are training children to use Lifebuoy Health Soap. Each child—nearly two million—keeps at home a fascinating Lifebuoy Wash-up Chart which makes a game of cleanliness, with gold stars to be won for a perfect record. Mothers co-operate, for these charts entirely change the attitude of children towards washing and bathing.

Why do you suppose teachers, Health Commissioners, Mayors and millions of sensible mothers have this enthusiastic faith in the protection of Lifebuoy?

The new cleanliness convinced them

Dirty hands—the kind of dirt you can see—are convincingly, satisfyingly clean after a Lifebuoy wash. But make this test: Wash with Lifebuoy when your hands are not really dirty—just sticky and uncomfortable. Watch the astounding amount of dirt that comes off. Where does it come from?

That dirt tells the whole Lifebuoy story. It's the oily moisture and body-waste always collecting in pores. In it thrive and multiply the germs that get on your hands constantly—from almost everything and everyone you touch and from street dirt. Wonderful Lifebuoy later gets it all—floods it away. Germs go too.

The skin lives

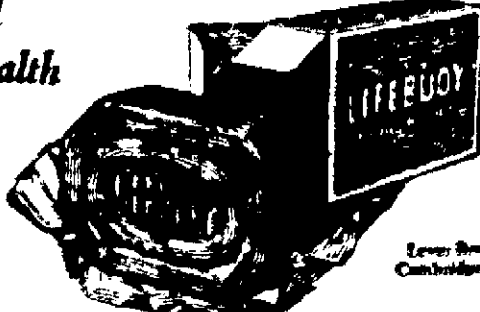

It is this purifying of pores that gives that delightful feeling of being cleaner than ever before. It is the secret—the only secret—of a beautiful skin. Day by day the skin grows smoother, softer, with lovely color pulsing just below the surface. The skin lives.

The Health Doctor

Write for a Wash-up Chart

If the Lifebuoy Clean Hands Campaign has not reached your children's school, write to us for a Wash-up Chart for each child, enclosing an empty Lifebuoy carton. It will be a big help in teaching your children to keep clean. They will wash and bathe without nagging—like to, because it's a game.

FIND RELICS OF PREHISTORIC RACE

Tennessee Latest to Yield Treasures of Historic Value.

Chattanooga.—Was the genus homo cradled in the heart of the Cumberland mountains in eastern Tennessee? This is the startling question which archaeologists may begin to ask themselves following the discovery by P. E. Cox, state geologist of Tennessee, of evidence which he thinks may establish Pickett county, Tennessee, as the "cradle of mankind."

Professor Cox's research seems at least to establish that here in the heart of the Cumberland mountains was many thousands years ago a human community which had emerged into tribal consciousness, but had by no means made the racial progress attributed to the famous Southerners of France.

The discovery was first made known to the Tennessee archaeological experts about the middle of January, and Professor Cox and his assistants have just completed an investigation.

Among other things they have found hieroglyphics of human figures, cut in the "sandstone" that are probably thousands of years old, and graves which indicate many prehistoric burial customs, at this colony between the Wolf and Obed rivers in Pickett county, Tennessee.

Professor Cox has discussed his find thus:

"Much has been written as a result of archaeological exploration in Europe, tending to establish Europe as the most ancient home of man. Practically all of the evidences on which this theory is based has been procured from caverns in France, Germany, Austria and Belgium.

"Evidence, it is believed, of an equal antiquity of man, has, within the first weeks of January, 1925, been discovered by the department of archeology. A survey was made during the week ending January 9, 1925, of the caverns, mounds and evidences of habitations along the Wolf and Obed rivers.

Discovery of Ancient Rock.

"In Pickett county, within the first weeks of January, at an elevation of approximately 1,000 feet, there was discovered an enormous round set rock about 40 feet in diameter, so located that an unobstructed view for miles, even to the lofty range of the Cumberland mountains, is presented; about 100 feet below this stone is a beautiful battlement; on the north side of this stone are three manmade holes, round and symmetrical, 5 inches in diameter, about 2 feet apart, cut to a depth of 18 to 24 inches; on the edges around this stone are thirty smaller holes of lesser depth; on the face of the stone are twelve pits or ovens of an average diameter of 2 feet, about 6 inches in depth, all of which have been burned; on each of the sides of this stone are ancient arrow designs pointing to the north, south, east and west; there are also inscribed thereon ancient single line human figured designs and lines indicating counters; these counter lines do not exceed ten in one group; this ancient stone monument is almost covered with these ancient markings, which appear on removing the moss growing and attached to the stone.

"The exposed portion of this stone is approximately 13 feet thick, and immediately under its shelf burned human bones were discovered; this stone is apparently the southern exposed edge of the cliff, below which, about 800 feet, Obed river flows, the cliff being almost perpendicular; this stone is exposed on both the east and west, there being a narrow point extending toward the southeast, the area immediately on the summit covered by this entire stone, some of which is not exposed, is about three acres. A hurried examination disclosed several hundred pits cut in the stone varying from 1 to 4 feet in diameter and from 6 to 10 inches deep; numbers of these pits have connecting conduits cut in the rock; most of all the pits show the effect of fire therein.

"At the extreme south point of the cliff and about 20 feet below the summit there was found the entrance to a large cavern; at about 15 feet from the entrance two avenues or passageways appear, leading into two separate chambers; the interior is perfectly dry and the floors are covered with ashes, which had not been opened more than 2 feet; human skeleton matter, flint implements, pottery and burned human and animal bones were found in this ash.

Many Skeletons Found.

"A man who assisted in this exploration said that a great number of human skeletons were found; that the entrance was closed by stones set in place, which he assisted to remove; the cavern walls show evidences of fire; on returning from the entrance to the cavern, to the monumental scene, an ancient single line arrow was found, the pointer of which was directly to the cavern; on observing on the monumental stone a single line arrow pointing toward the northwest, we followed this lead, and at a distance of about 500 feet discovered an entrance to another cavern, the entrance closed by stones which had been placed. Not being equipped to remove the large entrance stone, no examination was made of the interior of this cavern.

"All of these pits are cut in a sandstone rock, evidently because this stone withstands fire action; the greater part of the stone in this section is white and blue limestone, but the sandstone selected this large area of a sandstone surface to utilize the pits, a great number of which contained ash and charcoal. These pits were evidently used either for ceremonial and sacrificial purposes or for communal cooking purposes.

This monumental site was most probably used for ages as the home of the ruler, who no doubt occupied as his home the large flat monumental stone, the holes therein being used to erect therein the standards or insignia of authority.

"Many ages ago, no doubt, this stone, now almost covered with ancient pictographs, was the scene of the weird and primal ceremonies of a people whose antiquity is probably equal, if not superior, to that of any prehistoric European people. The writer has been unable to find any record of there having been found, in any part of the world, such quantities of pits or ovens cut by human hands and when the monumental stone and burial caves are found in the immediate vicinity, there is at least established long occupancy by a large population, and the custom of using caverns for burial purposes, as well as the fact of closing the cavern entrance.

Huge Cavern.

"Located a short distance to the northeast of the above described site is a cavern having an opening of more than 200 feet across, above which, at a height of about 100 feet is the natural stone roof; thousands of tons of rock have fallen on the dry floor, and beneath these fallen stones is a floor of ashes from three to six feet deep; excavations disclosed hearths, ash and charcoal commingled with burned and unburned human and animal bones, flint and bone implements, broken pottery; the area of this ash is approximately two acres under the shelving rock and outside the darkness of the cavern; no exploration of the interior was made.

"From enormous fallen stones twenty-nine skeletons have been removed from stone graves; a great quantity of flint, bone and stone implements were found, as well as thousands of bone and shell beads. None of the skeletal remains were preserved by the excavator, so it was not possible to acquire any knowledge as to the cranial or other peculiarities. Across the gulch from this entrance is a large rock shelter, the floor covered with ash and evidences of fire. The roof and sides of the cavern bear evidence of long use of fire, and the slight excavations, clearly establish human occupancy.

"No careful excavations have been made to discover animal skeletal remains, which would tend to fix chronology by the fauna.

"Between the two described sites on the summit of a high hill washed by Obed river is a summit deposit of limestone shelving rock about one mile in length. A hurried examination disclosed great quantities of ash with which is found burned and unburned human bones, broken in small pieces, along with flint and pottery fragments; long use of fire is indicated on the sides and roof of the shelves; numbers of human skeletons have been taken from this site along with perfect pottery, in many cases the urns being filled with beads made of shell and bones; in some instances thousands of these heads are broken in two pieces, a condition not heretofore found east of the Mississippi.

Bodies Wrapped in Skin.

"In this district and beneath the shelving rocks, it is reported, there was discovered and removed from the ash beds the remains of a human being carefully wrapped in the skin of a fur-bearing animal, which was placed beneath mattresses made of cane interwoven. The body had been clothed with a garment made of threads, which threads were made of the inner bark of trees and, woven with the fiber, bird feathers were found. This burial method, and particularly the custom of weaving bird feathers in the thread, is recognized as being used among many prehistoric races in different parts of the world, the chronology of which is reasonably well established.

"It is evident that these people practiced the custom of removing the flesh from the bones of their dead; probably burned the bones and then they were placed in the caverns and, after having placed in an urn or some receptacle food for the spirit on its journey to the final home, sealed with stone the entrance to the cavern, thus indicating the belief of an existence beyond this life.

"Along the valley of Obed river are numerous earth mounds, similar in appearance to those of the middle basin of Tennessee, carrying evidences of agriculture.

"The marked difference between the cave dwellers and the mound occupants is the absence of any evidence of agricultural pursuits by the cave dwellers.

"Central and South America are being diligently explored in the effort to find the evidence of the cradle of civilization. Europe, Asia, Australia, Africa and the islands of the seas are being examined and explored for a like purpose.

"Within the confines of Tennessee are known evidences of human occupancy and utilization by prehistoric man, at a date when he existed by the fruits of the chase long prior to the advent of the races that followed agricultural pursuits."—New York Herald and Tribune.

Halts Jail Term

Danville, Va.—The fact that she has 11 children and is badly needed at home saved Mrs. Ella Clay of Campbell county from spending 30 days in jail for alleged attempt to steal Bibles, valued at $3.50, in a local store. She was fined $10, and Magistrate Carter suspended the jail term on representations by her husband.

United States Dinosaurs

Great animals as well as great men sometimes "leave behind them footprints on the sands of time." Experts of Uncle Sam's Department of the Interior have discovered that tracks found in the rock on the Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona are the footprints of dinosaurs made about 10,000,000 years ago. The prints are 16 inches long.

Tagging Major League Bases

Jack Fournier, Brooklyn first baseman, got the newspaper decision over Benny Myers, Philadelphia coach, in a limited round bout, which was halted to save the spectators from further punishment. Oh, yes. The Dodgers won the ball game, 6 to 4.

A five run rally in the second staked the Senators to a 5 to 2 decision of the Yankees in a game that was halted at the end of the sixth inning because some one forgot to equip the players' caps with coal miners' lamps.

The Reds made it two in a row over the Cardinals, 4 to 2, thanks to the commendable pitching of Sonor Luque.

Home runs by Ess and Wright prompted the Pirates to come back like a carrier pigeon and beat the Cubs, 5 to 4, Meadows holding the Cubs to one hit until the seventh.

Earl Sheely again was a very offensive person and the White Sox evened up the series at one-all by beating the Tigers 9 to 6. Sheely's triple in the second started the ball rolling and it seldom stopped.

The Athletics took another fall out of the Red Sox, 5 to 3, Sam Gray's pitching having a chastening effect on the visiting firemen.

New York, April 16.—Jake Schaefer, world's balk line billiard champion, declared today that he might abandon his proposed European tour owing to hesitancy on the part of the promoters there to meet his financial demands and the possibility that his match with Roger Conn might be postponed because of the Frenchman's ill health.

British Golfers Best in Years

That British Golf Is Coming Back to Former Eminence, Is Proven at Recent Tournament—Winner of 1925 Title Will Be in Rare Form.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, April 16.—Politely pained by the fact that those bally Americans have won three championships and finished second in another in the last four years, British golfers are preparing to present the most determined defense of their open title in the modern history of the event. A hallowed institution, up to and including 1920 and not to be trifled with by outsiders, the British have seen first Jock Hutchison and then Walter Hagen violate their sacred traditions and make merry around the rim of their championship trophy.

They accounted for the Hutchison victory by pointing out that Jock was a reformed Scotchman, anyway. Hagen, however, has had them stopped with palate in mid air. He is about as British as the postmaster at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Hagen is going back for another whirl at the cup. So is Macdonald Smith, who was six or seven strokes under par for 72 holes in winning the North and South open some days ago. They will be the big guns of the invasion but Great Britain, for the first time since the war, is ready.

British golf is coming back to the eminence it knew before the late unpleasantness in Europe disrupted its sport organizations and made a jest of its athletic man power. This was proved at the recent tournament at Roehampton.

On the occasion in question, Abe Mitchell, who has the golf to beat any man in the world, turn in a pair of 67's, Arthur Havers had one 66 and Aubrey Boomer and James Ockenden replied with 68's.

The pace was so fast, in fact, that men like Ted Ray, American open champion in 1920; J. H. Taylor and Sandy Herd failed to qualify at all. They played good golf in the middle seventies but younger men rose from comparative obscurity to displace the veterans.

There was, for example, A. Compson, of North Manchester, with a pair of 70's. He is a new one to international rating. So are P. Allis, R. G. Wilson, M. J. Bingham, C. Johns, W. Robertson, High Roberts, F. Holden and W. L. Ritchie, all of whom were well under 150 for 36 holes.

This meant only one of two things: Either Roehampton is not a championship course, which there is no reason to believe, or the American that wins the 1925 British title will play the golf of his career.

THE SANDMAN STORY

MR. AND MRS. SPARROW

MR. AND MRS. SPARROW lived in a comfortable nest behind a blind on a house and they had never thought about living in a tree until one day Mrs. Sparrow, who never liked seeing anything that went on with her sharp black eyes, spied Mrs. Robin on her nest in the midst of the green leafy tree.

The wind was awaying the leaves and branches gently and Mrs. Sparrow looked she thought how nice it must be to live in such a cool place. "It is just like a cradle for their children," she told Mr. Sparrow, "and I think I will take that nest next year and live in the tree."

So when Mr. and Mrs. Robin had raised their family Mrs. Sparrow began to bustle about and talk of moving, but her husband told her she had better wait until spring.

"We are all nice and comfortable behind this blind," he said. "Why not stay here, and if you still care to live in a tree in the spring we can move then."

"Why, how you talk," said Mrs. Sparrow. "Of course, I shall want to live in a tree. It is much more genteel than living behind an old blind. Some one may close it any minute and let your nest tumble."

"I shall keep my wits about me, for if we don't watch out those robins will come flying back early and take that tree again for their home."

So early in the spring while Mr. Sparrow still shivered with the cold every time he flew from behind the blind, Mrs. Sparrow insisted that they move into the robins' nest.

"I would just like to see that pair get me out of this," she said as she nestled down into the nest, but I must say it will need quite a bit of repairing, but I shall stay right here, because if Mrs. Robin comes along she may take it instead of building a new one."

Mrs. Sparrow was right. In a few days Mr. and Mrs. Robin flew up and went straight to the tree where they had lived the summer before and there on their old nest sat Mrs. Sparrow, her black eyes snapping defiance at them.

"You fly right up there, Robin, and tell them that nest belongs to us. We built it last year," said Mrs. Robin, as she and her husband sat on a lower limb of the tree.

"No need to come up here," chirped Mrs. Sparrow. "You can't expect to have a home kept vacant for you, gallivanting all about the country as you do."

"We live in this part of the country all the year and why shouldn't we have first choice, I should like to know; so you can fly right along and find another place, for I am going to stay right here. Possession is nine points of the law, you know, and I have possession."

Just then Mrs. Robin whispered something to her husband and he replied, "You are right," and off they flew without another word to Mrs. Sparrow.

"Now I wonder what she told him," said Mrs. Sparrow, leaning out of the nest and looking around. "Something she saw that sent them off in such a hurry, I'll be bound."

Suddenly Mrs. Sparrow's eyes opened wide, for there was a big puss coming straight for the tree and looking up at it with her tail switching back and forth over her neck.

"My goodness, me!" exclaimed Mrs. Sparrow getting her wings spread for flight. "I do believe it is the cat that was a kitten last summer. I can't bring up my children in this tree. She would be certain to climb up here and—"

Mrs. Sparrow did not finish what she was saying. She flew straight away from that tree to her old home and when her husband came to take one more look at the nest he liked so well he found his wife sitting there blinking at him.

"Changed your mind?" he asked. "Yes," replied Mrs. Sparrow. "Wise people do, why not birds? That nest needed too much repairing for one thing and the other is there is a big cat prowling around."

And that was just what Mrs. Robin whispered to her mate, that the kitten which lived in the house last year had grown to be a big cat and she would not think of risking the lives of her children by living in that tree."

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Find out your name's history; why it was chosen; its meaning; its lucky day, lucky hour.

JOYCE

IN ONE particular era in feminine nomenclature, names of gladness figured prominently. Joyce is one of those. It is not extraordinarily popular and it is not nearly so pretty as its French equivalent, Jocelyne. It signifies—sportive or merry.

Etymologists tell us that it comes from the French Joie, which was meant to express an inarticulate shout of ecstasy. The original cry is preserved in the Swiss jodel or shout of the mountaineers. A number of family names have come from this happy source, among them the well-known Joy, Jadoca, which is frequent in Wales, and Jacosa still in common usage among the English.

Joyce came directly from this latter name. France took it but found it too British and evolved the musical Jocelyn.

The emerald is Joyce's talismanic stone. It is the gem of youth and springtime and hope. It is said to preserve for her the joyful legacy which her name implies. Thursday is her lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

THE CUCKOO

IN ENGLAND, in fact in all northern Europe, numerous superstitions cluster around the cuckoo, where the bird is "a fortune teller, a weather prophet, a magical creature that can change into a hawk, an immortal and omniscient being." In this country, so far as the writer has been able to discover, there is only one superstition regarding the cuckoo. In some sections of the country—in Maine for instance—it is thought to be a warning of death in the family to hear a cuckoo sing near the house. Mrs. Bergen, in a note to a memoir of the American Folk-Lore society, thus accounts for the wealth of superstition regarding the cuckoo in Europe and the scantiness of it here: "The note of the American cuckoo is less peculiar and therefore it does not seem to have attracted much popular attention. Many intelligent people are unacquainted either with the appearance or the notes of the two specimens common in the Northern states." To which might be added that if it were not for the cuckoo-clock the great majority of us in this country would be entirely ignorant of the call of the cuckoo.

The cuckoo has had a reputation for magical qualities from the days of the Romans, and probably from before that time. As to the American superstition that the call of the bird near a house foretells death the same superstition exists in Europe and can easily be traced to the reputation the cuckoo has of destroying the eggs in the nests of other birds before taking that nest for his own purposes. It is an omen of death to the hatching eggs when a bird hears the cuckoo near his nest—his house. And so man, for this reason, came to associate the cry of the cuckoo near his dwelling with the same idea; an idea sliding naturally into a fixed and enduring superstition. And that all the more readily because of the general mystic reputation of the cuckoo.

Seek to Evade Wheeler Trial

Three-fourths of Venetians Ask to Be Excused From Jury Duty as LaFollette's Running Mate Goes on Trial.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Great Falls, Mont., April 16.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, and vice presidential candidate on the LaFollette ticket, went on trial in federal court here today on charges of misuse of his senatorial office.

Three-fourths of the veniremen called for the trial of Senator Wheeler sought to be excused from jury service when the trial opened today. In the indictment, read to a packed court room, Wheeler was charged with having accepted, after his election, a fee of $4,000 from Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator, to appear before the interior department at Washington, to obtain oil and gas permits.

After this trial Wheeler must answer an indictment at Washington, charging him with conspiracy to obtain government oil and gas lands in Montana.

Long before court convened today throughs of curiosity seekers jammed the little court house, anticipating sensational. The trial has engendered the bitterest feeling and aroused the entire state as seldom before.

On the trial's outcome, admittedly, may rest Wheeler's political destiny. If convicted, Wheeler must vacate his seat and will be denied all public offices. If acquitted, political leaders of all affiliations admit he will gain tremendous political prestige.

Tax Publicity Cases Argued

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, April 16.—The right of newspapers to publish individual income tax payments was argued today before the Supreme court of the United States. The Kansas City Journal-Post and the Baltimore Daily Post, two of the many newspapers publishing such returns under the publicity feature of the 1924 revenue law, were indicted by the government for a test case.

The lower federal courts held publications were legal. Solicitor General Clegg argued for the government that the right of inspection of the income tax returns provided by law did not give the right of publication in newspapers. Inspection was a much narrower right than that of publication. Great harm might be done through the publicity of income tax returns and the inquisitiveness of "Paul Pry's" into the private affairs of individuals. This was not contemplated or desired, under the law, he said.

Senator Reed, of Missouri, and former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, representing the newspapers, argued that the law gave the right of publication in the newspapers when it provided that the returns should be opened to public inspection. There was no prohibition against dissemination of tax returns by speech and the effort by the government to distinguish between the right of public speech and the right of publication in the papers could not be justified. They also insisted the attempt to punish the newspapers for publishing these returns was an abridgement of the freedom of the press which was prohibited by the Federal constitution.

Kills Sweetheart And Himself

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, April 16.—Miss Golda Mintz, 19, was shot and killed by her sweetheart, Alexander Torkorian, a designer, in the plant of the Art Textile Corporation at 432 East Fifty-ninth street today.

Torkorian tried to kill Gabriel Arakelia, foreman at the place, and then attempted to kill himself. He emptied two magazines and part of the third of an automatic pistol at his sweetheart and the foreman. She was killed instantly. Arakelia was shot in the neck and thigh but not seriously hurt. Torkorian then shot himself twice in the head. He may recover, however.

Police said Torkorian and Arakelia quarreled over the girl yesterday. When Miss Mintz went into the foreman's office for instructions for the day's work, Torkorian followed, police claim, and culminated the quarrel in a fusillade of shots.

Torkorian was placed under arrest at the hospital.

POULTRY FACTS

POULTRY DAMAGED BY DISINFECTANTS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
As a result of the widespread use of cheap coal tar products with a strong carbolic acid odor for disinfecting poultry houses and coops, large quantities of poultry contaminated with the odor have been received at some of the big markets. The bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, has received complaints from handlers of market poultry who have suffered heavy losses because of the unsalability of tainted fowl, one large firm reporting a loss of $10,000 on four cars.

Because of the appearance of European fowl pests in certain parts of the country, farmers throughout the East and Middle West, through fear of this disease, have been doing much more disinfecting than usual. In many instances chemicals with strong and offensive odors have been used, many of them not in the list approved by the department, and in some cases the results have been aggravated by the failure to dilute the product. Birds kept in houses so treated, or shipped in crates reeking with the odors, absorb them into their bodies, where they remain after the birds have been killed and dressed. It is thought that another source of the contamination in dressed birds may have been feed on which the chemicals have been sprayed. When such penetrating odors are present in the disinfectant used the birds should not be marketed within less than two weeks of the time it was used and then not in crates recently so treated.

Coops and poultry houses should always be thoroughly cleaned before disinfecting. A good plan is where possible to scrub the interior with hot lye solution or scalding hot water. Such cleaning solutions are themselves good disinfectants. If scalding hot water is not available, the coops may be disinfected with a 4 per cent solution of formaldehyde. While this disinfectant has a very pungent, disagreeable smell, the odor soon disappears. If the poultry are marketed for several weeks a three per cent solution of compound solution of cresol or a product of similar composition may be employed. Any coal tar disinfectant is apt to leave an odor which will gradually disappear.

Many cheap products are now being sold in response to the unusual demand which has arisen since the appearance of the fowl pest. In certain sections peddlers are taking advantage of the situation and are going to the farms with a great variety of cheap disinfectants, sometimes doing the work for the farmer. Some of them are selling strong smelling by-products from local gas plants.

The department wishes to encourage efforts at disease prevention, even though much of this work is being done in regions far removed from any point where fowl pest has been found, but urges farmers to use the above-mentioned methods, which will not leave a taint in the fowls when offered to the consumer.

Sodium Fluorid Useful in Treating Poultry

Sodium fluorid is an insecticide used in treating poultry for lice by placing just a small bit of it at different points in the feathers of the fowl where lice are usually found. Although it is a poisonous substance, the poultry do not seem to get enough of it into their digestive system to cause trouble. If used on cattle there would be more danger of poisoning, because cattle would be more likely to get it into their digestive system by licking themselves.

For cattle a mixture of one-half powdered sublimed seed and one-half sulphur is favored. This can be spread along the backs and necks of cattle where the lice are most likely to be, and will be found quite effective in keeping them in check so that they will cause very little trouble to the cattle.

Poultry Facts

Capotes the cockerels.

Goats never eat much during the first few days.

Chicks given the right kind of start in life have many advantages over those receiving only indifferent care.

It is very important not to feed the poults too heavily, especially the first few weeks. Keep them just a little hungry.

Butterfats is an almost indispensable feed for growing chicks and may be given in any one of a number of forms.

Fallens which are well grown and matured are the ones which make profitable layers during the coming winter.

Young turkeys seem to have a great fondness for new corn when it is just past the milk stage, and they probably could not get anything that is worse for them if they wanted to.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, April 16.—Industrial and railroad stocks resumed their forward movement today after considerable hesitation, largely the result of profit taking and short selling. While the motor stocks remained most prominently in the leadership they were given better support by the railroad stocks, the specialties and the industrial leaders, particularly United States Steel and American Can.

Traders in oil stocks were confused by the apparent mixup in prices of crude and refined petroleum, and the selling was more insistent than the buying.

United States Steel reached the highest price level on the current move. Cast Iron Pipe recovered after early weakness. Magma Copper was in good demand following the resumption of dividend payments by the company. Radio Corporation, in a drive against the shorts, reached 60 1/2, up three points.

Maxwell B moved up six points to 79 1/2 in active trading in the third hour.

Call money rates were unchanged but time money was firmer.

Birth Rate in Japan Highest

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Tokyo, April 16.—Japan has the highest birth rate of any nation in which vital statistics are kept. It also has the highest death rate.

Figures for 1923, the latest to be tabulated, show that there were 2,684,991 births in Japan during that year, while there were 1,350,729 deaths, an increase in population of 733,362. On a percentage basis, this indicates an annual population increase of 1.2, or at the rate of 12 for each 1,000 residents.

The Japanese birth rate in 1923 was 34.94 in 1,000. The next highest rate in any recorded country was Portugal, with 32.9. The Japanese death rate for that year was 22.78 to 1,000—higher than that of any other nation.

Marriages totaling 516,289 were solemnized in Japan during 1923, while there were 51,556 divorces. Figures show that Japan has a divorce rate of 0.88 for every 1,000 marriages.

The comedy "The Rebellion of Youth" which will be presented at the Fair Street Church on Tuesday evening, April 21, has been a great success throughout the country. Miss Woolsey has surrounded herself with a competent cast, and an enjoyable evening is promised.
